eyewear jewelry adorns atlanta

We've all been there. We find that one outfit in the entire store that speaks to us; it fits perfectly and truly makes us feel downright fabulous. In it, we feel like we can conquer the world ... until we realize that we need something to hold our glasses. Whether smart and sassy reading glasses or the essential sun shades that protect our peepers, spectacles are often necessary accoutrements to our ensembles. With this fact comes the realization that glasses are hard to keep up with. Yes, it's convenient to have them dangling around your neck, patiently waiting to adorn your face, but there aren't many stylish product options to hold them. This is where Voyeur steps on the scene. Designed by Atlanta native Sara Weinberger, this jaw-dropping collection of gorgeous eyewear jewelry elegantly makes glasses a functional piece of your wardrobe. Created for both men and women, Voyeur is made of precious stones, diamonds or various other materials, and truly is jewelry with a purpose. Whether you opt for the classic chain style or the rosary-inspired design, you will be proud to drape these pieces around your neck. Voyeur is available at 3226 in Buckhead and online at wearvoyeur.com.

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW

Looking for something new to dress up your home? How about something old? At The Painted Ladies in Marietta, you can find vintage pieces that are a little bit of both. The new shop, which is open Fridays and Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. – 5:30 p.m., features recycled vintage furniture that has been freshly painted and reupholstered based on inspired designs by Judy McManus. The store is a collaboration between McManus and her aunt, Shirley Cole, an award-winning garden and interior designer who has been designing gardens in and around Marietta for 25 years. In addition to furniture, the store offers garden accessories, art and original oil paintings by Bess Kerns. 104 Lakewood Road, Marietta, 770-403-2225
